

Leading Through Change

- Great leaders make strategic half time adjustments
- Changed people change situations
- Change affects our emotions
- When your original plans are destroyed, focus on what's left, not what's lost
- Use discontentment as a catalyst for change
- In the midst of chaos, there is also opportunity- if we seek it
- The life of a company is like the changing seasons
- Leaders ask great questions
- A growing business is always changing
- Change requires a heavy down payment of courage
- Crisis brings change
- When it starts raining, it's too late to start building the Ark.
- Anticipate crisis early on, to prevent recovery later on
- The finest moments in a person's life are defined by unexpected change

The uncertainty of change can make us restless, anxious, and afraid... That's normal...

We either underestimate a major problem, Or overestimate a minor problem.

When there is great trouble, leaders don't shove it under the rug. Denial is not just a river in Egypt.

Not every workplace storm is in the forecast.
